I'm tired of being told, and feeling like I did something wrong for being at the Capital on January 6th.

I was there with fellow Patriots. We had a great time as a whole gathering as one. There is no time in 99% of people's lives that could ever compare to the joy in being together for the same thing. The future of our Republic. Don't let them ever ruin that day for you.

This is a civil rights violation. It is oppressing and persecuting an entire class of voters to deny their rights to assemble and to deny their voice in the political arena.

Absolutely! It was their plan the moment they realized January 6th there would be an outpouring of love and hope for our Great Republic. Fostered by the love our President showed us.

The tens of thousands that were surrounded me had no plans on storming the capital.

There was an old political cartoon, I think it was about the Occupy wall street protests, it showed normal looking people in the back ground holding innocent signs, then in the front was a journalist with a camera and mic interviewing a clown.

The media will always find the worst people out there to highlight because a group of people singing our spangled banner is not as good for ratings as people in costumes walking around the capitol building.

▼ So true. Unfortunately it's not just the media. It's the entire swamp. President Trump kept his promise with that. He drained it. He showed us all of the evil creatures that used to live under the swamp. It's our time to get rid of them.

▼ I was there.. It was patriotic. I did not go inside.. but if FBI wants to come say hi just for me being there, I'm gonna tell them they need to justify spending taxpayer dollars on investigating me instead of the obvious vote fraud. And, I want to thank the completely outnumbered police for firing invigorating teargas at us before we even approached the area instead of bullets.

I love my country.. even when it frustrates me to all hell.

▼ Don't even speak to them. If you feel you must recite what Nancy Pelosi said about "protests". We will prevail.

 If the fed faggots didn't flash bang and pepper spray the patriots for an hour we may have not crashed the place. Fuck them

 I wasn't there myself, I was just guilty of the "crime" of retweeting the info about the peaceful protest outside the capitol. So I guess I was there in spirit.

Peaceful protest is an absolute right and it's the first one on the list.

“ Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

There was nothing wrong with being there. It's literally the "right of the people peaceably to assemble".

The useful idiots committing crimes in the capitol building have nothing to do with this right. Last I checked though, criminals are still individually responsible for their criminal actions.

 For every person that tries to shame you there are a thousand patriots that would have loved to be there with you. Thank you for being there for our president, and thank you for representing those of us who could not be there.

 No hero, just a fellow Pede.

3 I went with my husband and another family member. And I was up there fighting with the police. But regardless I felt the unity between all of us. Being there to be part of history. Being part of something that's much bigger and greater than yourself. Fighting for something you love and want to protect. That feeling is the best high I've ever had in my life. I don't ever want to forget it. Ever.

3 They were shoving people down the stairs, so we were mostly holding the line for the older folks to get the hell out of there. They were also throwing flashbangs into the middle of the crowd which is just asking for someone to get a piece blown off. I personally had to pick up an older lady and walk her down the stairs. It was kind of a shitshow.

1 Fucking unbelievable. They knew that there was going to be a protest. They denied help. What you did was great! Goes to show how we care about We The People. They're rather the elderly die. They don't show that. Their hate runs deeper than anything I ever imagined any person could.

3 Even after I got maced, I immediately had people come over to help me. There's nobody that'll love you, fight for you, and take care of you like a Patriot would. I've learned that these last few years and it feels good to know we're not alone.

2 It was incredible how everyone there was looking out for everyone else. Sharing water to wash away pepper spray, physically supporting people who were more at risk in the crowd. Helping each other up over the barrier or back through the press of bodies. It was very inspiring. It was all for the love of our country.

I loved seeing the feisty grandmas that wanted to be right up in there. They were everyone's nana that day.

2 Class action lawsuits should be leveled against the media and the FBI for malicious prosecution. Our 14th ammendment rights to be treated equally are totally violated. Democrats have one rule of law, Patriots another...

2 I feel the same. It was the most patriotic and fundamentally American thing I have ever done. I would feel the same if I had gone inside. We were doing what Americans have always done and always have the right to do.

The over-reaction to it, and the propaganda surrounding it by both politicians and media, were absolutely UN-American, contrived, shameful, and straight out of the Communist handbook.

I'm proud of us. And I'm not going to pretend I'm not.

3 Haha! I was there for a long time. I was there on December 13th as well. I was not there to be a criminal. I will be there again when needed. That was not the day. I knew going down that anifags and fed fags we're going to run a false flag. I still went down. Crime doesn't pay. Now that the swamp has been drained we can primary each and every one of them traitors. Were you there?

3 We need to find a way to organize spontaneously and anonymously in such a way that makes it incredibly difficult for Antifa to infiltrate and for feds to ID individuals.

3 You can't be afraid of either. Antifa are a bunch of pussies, if you commit no crime you have nothing to worry about with the 3 letter fags. This is our country just as they say. These are our streets. We will no longer be silent.
